Fugitive tycoon Joseph Lau turns up to work, quashing rumours of his death

Fugitive tycoon Joseph Lau Luen-hung appeared at his company's headquarters with his wife, 37-year-old Chan Hoi-wan, at around lunchtime on Thursday, quashing speculation that the former Chinese Estates Holdings chairman had died.

Lau, 65, was seen arriving by limousine in Wan Chai, bodyguards in tow and escorted by Chan, now Hong Kong's richest woman after he transferred HK$11.3 billion worth of assets to her.

Rumours of Lau's demise began spreading after the property magnate Wednesday transferred all his shares in the company to Chan and his son, Lau Ming-wai, citing his poor health.

The tycoon, who has been suffering from renal failure, heart disease and diabetes, underwent a kidney transplant in November.

On Wednesday, he announced he had transferred his entire controlling stake in Chinese Estates, worth an estimated HK$16.99 billion, to his wife and son. Some analysts questioned the motive behind the move. All his moves, including the announcement of the new marriage (in December last year) and the latest share transfer, were too hasty.

One analyst said. "It's too high profile ... The possibility can't be ruled out that the rich man is playing financial tricks and trying to transfer the assets."

However, the company in its stock exchange filing cited "Lau's very unstable health" and a need to restructure "during his lifetime".

Joseph Lau has long drawn media attention for his wealth and high-profile romantic relationships with multiple women.

He married Chan, a former celebrity journalist and his long-time partner, after announcing in November last year his break-up with then-girlfriend Dr Yvonne Lui Lai-kwan through several full-page newspaper statements.

The businessman became a fugitive from the law after he was convicted by a Macau court for his part in a bribes-for-land scandal involving a business partner and former Macau public works chief Ao Man-long.

Lau was sentenced to five years and three months in jail in absentia, but remains free in Hong Kong because of the lack of a \*rendition agreement* between the two cities.

"surrender" or "handing over" of persons or property, particularly from one jurisdiction (area) to another

Questions to think about:

- Why is the law so important? Do you think people should be treated any differently before the law because of their social status or wealth? How are some people who break the law able to get away with it?
- Are there any high profile cases of people in Hong Kong or the world who have been convicted? Do you think it was justified?
- Do you think marriage between two people of very different ages can work? Why or why not? What do you think makes a successful marriage? Why are there more divorces nowadays than in the past?
- Lau's wife is now the richest woman in Hong Kong. Do you think she 'earned' or deserved this money? What would you do if you were given such a large sum?
