Judges shouldn't be targeted for their ruling against police officers convicted of assault

Despite the uproar caused by the ruling against the seven police officers, Hong Kong's independent judiciary remains a beacon* for the mainland

a source of light or inspiration*

We live in strange times. Supposedly well-trained law enforcement officers beat up a zip-tied suspect at an electricity substation in Admiralty. Although the assault was filmed and widely circulated, the seven officers repeatedly denied the accusations in court. They were sentenced to two years in prison.

A supposedly well-paid government official has been found guilty of misconduct in public office. Former chief executive Donald Tsang Yam-kuen was sentenced to 20 months in prison in a case related to a luxury flat on the mainland.

relating to or denoting an imagined place or state in which everything is unpleasant or bad, typically a totalitarian or environmentally degraded one*

Amid the chorus of outrage and triumph, fears of Hong Kong descending into a dystopian society* are virtually non-existent. The fact that we can confidently say this can be attributed to one thing – an independent judiciary. In Hong Kong, protesters who take to the streets don't have to worry about police violence, for they know that the courts would punish those who abuse their powers. Businesses can flourish here because there is very little corruption. Those who accept bribes or other advantages will be dealt with by the courts.

the judicial authorities of a country; judges collectively / a system of courts of

This is why it saddens me that British judge David Dufton, who handed down the sentence on the seven police officers who were convicted of assaulting Occupy Central protester Ken Tsang Kin-chiu, has been heavily criticised.

In addition to the wave of online insults, which included calling Dufton a “dog”, a WeChat account run by the mainland newspaper People's Daily questioned whether the judge was affected by his political stance.

Hong Kong lawmaker Wong Kwok-kin, of the Federation of Trade Unions, made things worse by branding Dufton a “white skin with yellow heart”. Yellow is the symbolic colour of the Occupy Central pro-democracy movement.

Such derogatory comments denigrate our judges and the sanctity of our legal system.

I believe that our judges have had sufficient training to realise the importance of setting aside their personal preferences when dealing with a court case. I believe they use careful reasoning and strictly adhere to the letter of the law in their rulings. The situation is somewhat similar to police officers who are trained to withstand pressure and provocations when carrying out their duties.

 action or speech that makes someone angry, especially deliberately*

I agree that Hong Kong is a divided society. Depending on one's political beliefs, one may be saddened or encouraged by Dufton's ruling. But either way, we should not easily dismiss the impartiality of our judiciary*. After all, it forms the backbone of Hong Kong's future development and prosperity.

Questions to think about:

- What do you understand to be the purpose of our judiciary? Why is the system of law in a country so important? What can happen if the system is not fair?
- What are your views on what happened with the conviction of the seven police officers?
- What has the reaction to the case shown you (about Hong Kong)? Do you think it is fair to ‘attack’ the judge?
- Would you think of a career in law? What difficulties could you have as a judge? Why is it such an important position? Who could try to influence you?

I: Vocabulary and understanding meaning: Match the meaning and/or synonym (words with a similar or the same meaning) to the words which have been highlighted in bold in the article.

Column A: Word from text	Letter	Column B: Meaning or synonym
1. accusation (n)	F	A: stick to / follow or believe in something
2. triumph (n)	H	B: fairness
3. abuse (v)	D	C: action or speech that makes someone angry, especially deliberately
4. flourish (v)	I	D: misuse (e.g use your position to influence others)
5. bribe (n)	G	E: point of view / standing / the attitude of a person or organization towards something

II: Usage of vocabulary: Choose the most appropriate word from the table above to fill in the missing words of the sentences below making sure your answers are grammatically correct.

- The world of politics can be a dirty one in which politicians may use (a) derogatory comments to (b) abuse and insult others. The use of (c) bribes, in other words, sums of money to influence people is another example of the misuse of power. Therefore, it is important to take a strong (d) stance to ensure corruption does not take place.
- We as a society rely on the impartiality and fairness of the judiciary to maintain law and order.
- The defendant stands accused of committing many a heinous (awful) crime.
- Despite all odds, Donald Trump triumphed in the last US elections. Nobody expected him to win.
- His business is flourishing, it is really doing well despite the tough economic climate.
- If people do not adhere to the laws and regulations of a country, it could result in chaos.
- The reason the dog attacked the young boy was because the boy provoked it by throwing stones at it. The dog is normally harmless.
